TO THE KINGS MOST Excellent Maiesty.

Most Gracious and Dread Soveraign,

THough I had the Honour to be very well known to His Majesty of ever Blessed Memory, Your most Royall Father, and to be a Sufferer in the loss of a considerable Estate, for His most Just Cause, yet I may not be so well known to Your Sacred Person: however, the same Duty that moved Me to fight for Him, remains in Me to write for You; not out of any Confidence in my Pen (for I am the first shall judge that my Self) but out of Conscience and Loyalty to my Soveraign; for whose sake, I resolve to hazard Censure, rather than to be wanting in any Discovery, that may tend to Your Majesties Interest, and indubitate Right.

The least loss of Power in a Magistrate, is a great Detriment to his Government, and an Advantage to his Enemies; the least Creep-Window robs the whole House; the least Errour in War not to be redeem'd: And as that ever Blessed late Martyr said (when He gave his Watch of Government, to be cleansed by the too-long Parliament) the least Pin of it being left out, would cause a Discord in the whole: Therefore might Solomon well say, Where the Word of a King is there is Power: The King and Power being Relatives.

That Printing belongs to Your Majesty, in Your publique and private Capacity, as Supream Magistrate, and as Proprietor, I do with all boldness affirm; and that it is a considerable Branch of the Regal Power, will no Loyal Person deny: for it ties, and unties the very Hearts of the People, as please the Author: If the Tongue, that is but a little Member, can set the Course of Nature on Fire; how much more the Quill, which is of a flying Nature in it self, and so Spiritual, that it is in all Places at the same time; and so Powerful, when it is cunningly handled, that it is the Peoples Deity.

That this Power which is intire and inherent in Your Majesties Person, and inseparable from Your Crown, should be divided, and divolve upon Your Officers (though never so great and good) may be of dangerous Consequence: You are the Head of the Church, and Supream of the Law; shall the Body govern the Head? Men use to trust, when they cannot avoid it; but that there may be a Derivative and Ministerial Power in them, with Appeal to Your Majesty, I do with all Humility admit and propose.

Printing is like a good Dish of Meat, which moderately eaten of, turns to the Nourishment and health of the Body; but immoderately, to Surfeits and Sickneses: As the Use is is very necessary, the Abuse is very dangerous: Cannot this Abuse be remedied any other way, then by depriving Your Majesty of Your Antient and Just Power? How were the Abuses taken away in Queen Elizabeth, King James, and the beginning of King Charles his time, when few or no Scandals or Libels were stirring? Was it not by Fining, Imprisoning, Seizing the Books, and breaking the Presses of the Transgressors, by Order of Councel-Board? Was it not otherwise when the Jurisdiction of that Court was taken away by Act of Parliament, 17 Car. If Princes cannot redress Abuses, can less Men redress them? I dare positively say, the Liberty of the Press, was the principal furthering Cause of the Confinement of Your most Royal Fathers Person: for, after this Act, every Male-content vented his Passion in Print; Some against his Person, some against his Government, some against his Religion, and some against his Parts: the Common People that before this Liberty believed even a Ballad, because it was in Print, greedily suckt in these Scandals, especially being Authorized by a God of their own making: the Parliament finding the Faith of the Deceived People to be implicitely in them, Printed the Remonstrance, the Engagement to live and dye with the Earl of Essex, the Covenant, &c. and so totally possest the Press that the King could not be heard: By this means the Common People became not onely Statists, but Parties in the Parliaments Cause, hearing but one side, and then Words begat Blows: for though Words of themselves are too weak Instruments to Kill a Man; yet they can direct how, and when, and what Men shall be killed: In the Statute of 21 Jac. Printing keeps very able Company, as Salt-Peter, Gun-Powder, Ordnance, &c. all which are Exempted from being Monopolies.

Not to be longer tedious, I too much fear, this late Act for two years compleats all the former Concessions of the late King: I know it was done in haste, and with a good Intent; but by Your Majesties Gracious Leave and Pardon, even then very considerable Persons in Your House of Commons, were of Opinion they had nothing to do with it, the Power of the Press being so wholly in Your Majesty. Indeed, Necessity that hath no Law, was the cause of this Law, viz. to hinder the Growth of Scandalous Books and Pamphlets; but it hath fallen very short of the End: for few or none, of many Printed, have bin brought in by the Stationers. I have now discharged my Duty to Your Majesty, and if I find I have so far prevailed upon Your Royall Goodness, as to ask unconcern'd Councel what is best to be done, I have my End; I hope Your Majesty will have the Advantage. So prayeth,

May it please your Honours,

I Have ever better understood mine own Disabilities, than to desire to appear in Print, where the Author stands as a Butt to be shot at, by the sharp Arrows of every busie Critick, and runs a most certain hazard, and most uncertain Benefit: But having been above twenty three years in Chancery, and other Courts of Justice; and spent more then then One Thousand Pounds, in vindicating the Kings Grant of Printing the Common Laws of England, and His Lawful Power to grant the same, and kept His Title alive even in the worst of Times (when 'twas reputed unlawful, because the Kings.) I cannot refrain from defending it, now the King is, or ought to be, restored to His Rights again; especially since all Persons are invited by Order to speak their Minds freely concerning this Subject: So that there is a Necessity upon me to speak now, or for ever hereafter to hold my Peace; this being probably the last time of Asking.

'Tis not unknown to every Member of each House, how little Benefit hath accrued to the Kingdom, by the late Act of Parliament for two years, Entituled, An ACT for preventing the frequent Abuses in Printing Seditious, Treasonable, and Unlicensed Books and Pamphlets, &c. Which Act determines June next: Nor can it be thought, but that there is Cause enough for another Act to take place, when this is expired. The Reason why this present Act hath operated so little is most apparent; because the Executive Power is plac'd in the Company of Stationers, who onely can offend, and whose Interest it is to do so: They are both Parties and Judges, and 'twere a high Point of Self-denial for Men to punish themselves: But they will wipe their Mouthes with Solomon's *Harlot, and take it very unkindly, if the same, or a greater Power be not continued to them in the next Act to be made: They will promise as fair as the Long Parliament did to the late King (to make Him a Glorious King) and perform it as certainly as they did too.*

Jugglers seldome shew the same Trick twice together; and the Italian Proverb is, If a man deceive me once, 'tis his fault; if twice, it is mine own: That the Great Council of this Nation, should further trust those that have deceived them already, and believe fair Pretences, contrary to Reason and Practise, would be a sad Fate upon us all; when wofull Experience tells us, That if the King be taken from being Head of the Law, there will not want a Law to take off His Head in a short time.

There were a sort of People in King David's time, which imagined Mischief as a Law; as in the late King's time, that practised Mischief by a Law: which might incline the Parliament to frame a strict Law against this kind of Mischief. But I hope the King's Mercy in forgivin such, (by which He imitates His Maker) will find so hearty a Conversion, that Ingratitude shall never joyn with Rebellion, to provoke a Tyrannical Government over this Kingdom: such Men (if I may so call them) are worse then the Gentiles, of whom St. Paul saith, That having not the Law, and doing by Nature the things contained in the Law, are a Law unto themselves, which shew the Law written in their Hearts; nay, worse then Beasts, who by Nature observe a Law amongst themselves.

Shall Sense and Reason alone teach Creatures willingly to confine themselves to certain Rules for the Common Good, and shall Professors of Christianity break them? Shall the Law of Nature command Men to be free from offending; and shall the Law of God be thought to command them to be free to offend? Let not our too-near Neighbours the Turks have that Advantage against us. But whilest I declaim against others for breaking their Bounds, I may be thought guilty of committing the same Errour my self; I shall therefore most humbly beg your Honours Pardon, and rest,

Your Honours

Most Humble, and Faithful

Servant,

RICHARD ATKINS.

THE Originall and Grovvth OF PRINTING.

REASON is the great Distinction between Man and Beast; Gusman calls the Man of most Knowledg, A God amongst Men. And Bishop Hall divides the whole Duty of Man into Knowledg and Practice. In the Infancy of the World (especially before the Sealing of the Scripture-Canon) God Revealed himself and his Will frequently, either Vocally by himself, as to Moses in the Mount; or else by divers and sundry other manners, As by Dreams, Visions, Prophecies, Extatics, Oracles, and other Supernatural means: Nor will I Blow up the Humours of these Times so high, as to Confine these his Miraculous Revelations to Gods People onely (though to them most frequently and especially), but sometimes also to Hypocrites within the Church, as to Saul and others; yea and sometimes even to Infidels, as to Pharaoh, Balaam, Nebuchadnezzar, Abimelech, &c. But since the Writings of the Prophets and Apostles, (commonly called the Scriptures) And that the Christian Church by the Preaching of the Gospel, is become Oecumenical, Dreams and other Supernaturall Revelations, as also other things of like nature as Miracles, have ceased to be of ordinary and familiar use; So as now we ought rather to suspect Delusion in them, than to expect Direction from them: Yet God hath no where abridged or Limited himself from these supernatural wayes of Revealing his his Will, in case his Written Word should be taken from us, or we from it: But we of this Latter Age have all these so Lively represented to our View, by the benefit of Printing, as if we our selves were personally present: For Printing is of so Divine a Nature, that it makes a Thousand years but as yesterday, by Presenting to our View things done so long before; and so Spirituall withall, that it flyes into all parts parts of the World without Wearinesse. Finally, 'tis so great a Friend to the Schollar, that he may make himself Master of any Art or Science that hath been treated of for 2000 years before, in lesse than two years time. But Virtue it self will not want Opposers, and Philosophy is ever odious to ignorant Ears: Nay, there are a sort of People in the World, that account Ignorance the Mother of Devotion, and therefore out of Conscience would not have even the Scriptures Printed in the Mother Tongue: But I shall not go out of my own Way, to bring them unto it, further than by defending the Theame I have in hand.

The great Benefit of Printing.

Concerning the time of bringing this Excellent ART into England, and by whose Expence and Procurement it was brought; Modern Writers of good Reputation do most erroniously agree together. Mr. Stowe in his Survey of London, speaking of the 37th year of King Henry the Sixth his Reign, which was Anno Dom. 1459. saith, That the Noble Science of PRINTING was about this time found in Germany at Magunce by one John Cuthenbergus a Knight, And that William Caxton of London, Mercer, brought it into England about the Year 1471. And first practised the same in the Abby of St. Peter at Westminster; With whom Sir Richard Baker in his Chronicle agrees throughout. And Mr. Howell in his Historicall Discourse of London and Westminster, agrees with both the former in the Time, Person, and Place in generall; but more particularly declares the Place in Westminster to be the Almory there; And that Islip Abbot of Westminster set up the first Press of Book-Printing that ever was in England. These three famous Historians having fill'd the World with the supposed truth of this Assertion, (Although possibly it might might arise through the mistake of the first Writer only, whose Memory I perfectly honour) makes it the harder Task upon me to undeceive the World again: Nor would I undertake this Work, but under a double notion; As I am a Friend to Truth, and so it is unfit to suffer one Man to be intituled to the worthy Atchievements of another. And as a Friend to my self, not to lose one of my best Arguments of Intituling the King to this ART in his Private Capacity.

Historians must of necessity take many things upon trust, they cannot with their own but with the Eyes of others see what things were done before they themselves were, Bernardus non vidit omnia; 'Tis not then impossible they should mistake. I shall now make it appear they have done so, from their Own, as well as from other Arguments: Mr. Stowe his Expressions are very dubious, and the matter expresst very Improbable; He saith PRINTING was found in Magunce, which presupposes it was practised some where else before, and lost: And further, That 'twas found in the Reign of Henry the Sixth, Anno Dom. 1459. and not brought into England till Eleven years in the succeeding Reign of Edward the Fourth, being 12 years after, as if it had been lost again. If this be true, there was as little Rarity as Expedition in obtaining it, the age of 12 years time having intervened, and so indeed it might be the Act of a Mercer rather than a more eminent Person: But when I consider what great advantage the Kingdome in general receives by it, I could not but think a Publique Person and a Publique Purse must needs be concerned in so publique a Good. The more I Considered of this, the more inquisitive I was to find out the truth of it: At last, a Book came to my hands Printed at Oxon. Anno Dom. 1468. which was three years before any of the recited Authours would allow it to be in England; which gave me some reward for my Curiosity, and encouragement to proceed further: And in prosecution of this Discovery, the same most worthy Person who trusted me with the aforesaid Book, did also present me with the Copy of a Record and Manuscript in Lambeth-House, heretofore in his Custody, belonging to the See (and not to any particular Arch-Bishop of Canterbury) the Substance whereof was this, (though I hope, for publique satisfaction, the Record it self, in its due time, will appear.)

Thomas Bourchier, Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, moved the then King (Hen. the 6th) to use all possible means for procuring a Printing-Mold (for so 'twas there called) to be brought into this Kingdom; the King (a good Man, and much given to Works of this Nature) readily hearkned to the Motion; and taking private Advice, how to effect His Design, concluded it could not be brought about without great Secrecy, and a considerable Sum of Money given to such Person or Persons, as would draw off some of the Work-men from Harlein in Holland, where John Cuthenberg had newly invented it, and was himself personally at Work: 'Twas resolv'd, that less then one Thousand Marks would not produce the desir'd Effect: Towards which Sum, the said Arch-Bishop presented the King with Three Hundred Marks. The Money being now prepared, the Management of the Design was committed to Mr. Robert Turnour, who then was of the Roabs to the King, and a Person most in Favour with Him, of any of his Condition: Mr. Turnour took to his Assistance Mr. Caxton, a Citizen of good Abilities, who Trading much into Holland, might be a Creditable Pretence, as well for his going, as stay in the Low-Countries: Mr. Turnour was in Disguise (his Beard and Hair shaven quite off) but Mr. Caxton appeared known and publique. They having received the said Sum of One Thousand Marks, went first to Amsterdam, then to Leyden, not daring to enter Harlein it self; for the Town was very jealous, having imprisoned and apprehended divers Persons, who came from other Parts for the same purpose: They staid till they had spent the whole One Thousand Marks in Gifts and Expences: So as the King was fain to send Five Hundred Marks more, Mr. Turnour having written to the King, that he had almost done his Work; a Bargain (as he said) being struck betwixt him and two Hollanders, for bringing off one of the Work-men, who should sufficiently discover and teach this this New Art: At last, with much ado, they got off one of the Under-Workmen, whose Name was Frederick Corsells (or rather Corsellis) who late one Night stole from his Fellows in Disguise, into a Vessel prepared before for that purpose; and so the Wind (favouring the Design) brought him safe to London.

'Twas not thought so prudent, to set him on Work at London, (but by the Arch-Bishops meanes, who had been Vice-Chancellor, and afterwards Chancellor of the University of Oxon) Corsellis was carryed with a Guard to Oxon; which Guard constantly watch'd, to prevent Corsellis from any possible Escape, till he had made good his Promise, in teaching how to Print: So that at Oxford Printing was first set up in England, which was before there was any Printing-Press, or Printer, in France, Spain, Italy, or Germany, (except the City of Mentz) which claimes Seniority, as to Printing, even of Harlein it self, calling her City, Urbem Maguntinam Artis Typographicæ Inventricem primam, though 'tis known to be otherwise, that City gaining that Art by the Brother of one of the Workmen of Harlem, who had learnt it at Home of his Brother, and after set up for himself at Mentz.

Printing first set up at Oxford.

This Press at Oxon was at least ten years before there was any Printing in Europe (except at Harlein, and Mentz) where also it was but new born. This Press at Oxford, was afterwards found inconvenient, to be the sole Printing-place of England, as being too far from London, and the Sea: Whereupon the King set up a Press at St. Albans, and another in the Abby of Westminster, where they Printed several Bookes of Divinity and Physick, (for the King, for Reasons best known to himself and Council) permitted then no Law-Books to be Printed; nor did any Printer exercise that ART, but onely such as were the Kings sworn Servants; the King himself having the Price and Emolument for Printing Books.

Printing depraved, by being Incorporated with others

Printing thus brought into England, was most Graciously received by the King, and most cordially entertained by the Church,

Church, the Printers having the Honour to be ſworn the King's Servants, and the Favour to Lodge in the very Boſome of the Church; as in Weſtminſter, St. Albans, Oxon, &c. By this meanes the ART grew ſo famous, that Anno prim. Rich. 3. cap. 9. when an Act of Parliament was made for Reſtraint of Aliens, from uſing any Handicrafts here (except as Servants to Natives) a ſpecial Proviſoe was inſerted, that Strangers might bring in Printed or Written Books, to ſell at their pleaſure, and Exerciſe the ART of Printing here, notwithſtanding that Act: So that in the ſpace of 40 or 50 years, by the eſpecial Induſtry and Indulgence of Edw. the Fourth, Edw. the Fifth, Rich. the Third, Henry the Seventh, and Henry the Eighth, the Engliſh prov'd ſo good Proficients in Printing, and grew ſo numerous, as to furniſh the Kingdome with Books; and ſo Skilfull, as to print them as well as any beyond the Seas, as appears by the Act of the 25 Hen. 8. cap. 15. which Abrogates the ſaid Proviſoe for that Reaſon. And it was further Enacted in the ſaid Statute, That if any perſon bought Forreign Books bound, he ſhould pay 6 s. 8 d. per Book. And it was further Provided and Enacted, That in caſe the ſaid Printers and Sellers of Books, were unreaſonable in their prices, they ſhould be moderated by the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treaſurer, the two Lord Chief Juſtices, or any two of them, who alſo had power to Fine them 3 s. 4 d. for every Book whoſe price ſhall be enhanced.

None but the Kings ſworn Servants permitted to be Printers.

The Price of Books not to be enhanced.

Thus was the ART of Printing, in its Infancy, Nurſed up by the Nurſing Father of us all, and in its riper Age brought up in Monaſteries of greateſt Accompt; and yet were the Inſtruments thereof reſtrained from the Evil of enhancing the prices of Books, to the Detriment of their Fellow-Subjects, by the Authority aforeſaid. While they had this Check upon them, they were not only Servants to the King, but Friends to the Kingdom: But when they were by Charter Concorporated with Book-Binders, Book-Sellers, and Founders of Letters, 3 and 4 Phil. and Mary, and called the Company of Stationers, the Body forgot the Head, and by degrees, (breaking the Reines of Government) they kickt againſt the Power that gave gave them Life: And whereas before they Printed nothing but by the Kings eſpeciall Leave and Command, they now (being free) ſet up for themſelves to print what they could get moſt Money by; and taking the Advantage of thoſe Virtiginous Times, of the latter end of Henry the 8. Edward the 6. and Queen Mary, they fill'd the Kingdom with ſo many Books, and the Brains of the People with ſo many contrary Opinions, that theſe Paper-pellets became as dangerous as Bullets, to verifie that Saying of Tertullian, That Lawyers Gowns hurt the Common-wealth as much as Souldiers Helmets. Thus was this excellent and deſireable ART, within leſs than one hundred years, ſo totally vitiated, that whereas they were before the King's Printers and Servants, they now grew ſo poor, ſo numerous, and contemptible, by being Concorporated, that they turn'd this famous ART into a Mechanick Trade for a Livelyhood.

Object. 1.

But here I muſt break off (though abruptly) and anſwer an Objection; for methinks I hear the Critick ſay, How can that be a Mechanick Trade now, that the Author allowes to be a famous Art heretofore, being alwayes one and the ſame thing?

The Matter of which before I anſwer, I muſt crave leave to give you the ſignification of the Word Mechanick; the rather, becauſe the ſeveral ſorts of Trades, of which the Company of Stationers are Compoſed (and more particularly the Book-Sellers who ſay they are of no Manufacture) do peremptorily deny themſelves to be Mechanicks.

How and why the ART is called a Mechanick Trade.

The Word Mechanicus, which ſignifies a Handicrafts-man, doth in the ſtrict Senſe comprehend Printers, Founders of Letters, and Book-Binders; And I believe, in the large Senſe, all Trades-men whatſoever: But if that be deficient, let us go to the Original Greek Word μηχανὴ, which ſignifies, a Cunning Contrivance of the Head, as well as Hand; and this will certainly take in all Trades, for as much as there is Cunning in all Trades: But if it ſhould miſs any, yet it cannot fail of the Company of Stationers, becauſe they are denominated a Myſtery, ſtery, and there the ſtrict ſignification of the Word comes in again.

Now for the matter of the Objection, That a Famous ART cannot be a Mechannick Trade.

Anſw. 2. I Anſwer, This is ſo far from being true, that there is nothing in Nature but is good or bad according as 'tis us'd; for the great Creator of all things made nothing to no purpoſe; even Meat and Drink (without which we cannot live) if abus'd, deſtroyes life; Twenty dye of Surfets, for one that is ſtarved for want of Meat. But to give you an inſtance ad idem:

A Simile taken from Muſick. Muſick is not onely an Art, but one of the Liberall Arts practiſed by Princes themſelves, and made inſtrumentall to the Glory of God; yet what Trade is there more deſpicable in the World both in Name and Nature, than a Common Fidler; though he may draw as good a ſound out of an Inſtrument, and have as much Art in Playing and Compoſing as any Gentleman, yet if he get his Living by it, and makes it his Trade, he is ſtill but a Fidler: and herein I pity him more than any of other Profeſſions, becauſe he perverts the Creation, and turns Day into Night; for moſt commonly when ſober Perſons are in Bed, he muſt play to pleaſe the humours of the lighter ſort; And though his Heart be ready to break through Melancholy, he muſt ſing a merry Song to delight the Company, if commanded, or have his Fiddle ſing about his Ears: Is not this Mechanick, think you?

But to Return where I digreſt; Printing became now ſo dangerous to the Common-wealth, That there were more Books Burnt in Ten years, than could be Printed in Twenty: And now it concern'd the Prince altogether as much to Suppreſs the Abuſe, as it was before to Obtain the Uſe of Printing; And had there not been a Reſerve of Licenſing ſuch Books as ſhould be Printed ſtill remaining in the Crown, they might have publiſhed the wickedneſs of their own Imaginations with Authority. But Queen Elizabeth at her very firſt Entrance to the Crown, finding ſo great Diſorders in Church and

and State, by reaſon of the abuſe in Printing, Secures in the firſt place the Law and the Goſpel, of both which the Kings and Queens of England have inherent Right as Heads of the Church, and Supream of the Law; and not onely in their publique, but private Capacity, as Proprietors; the Power and Signiory of this, under Favour, cannot be ſevered from the Crown: The Kings being the Truſtees of the People, who have formerly taken an Oath at their Coronation, That they ſhall keep all the Lands, Honours, and Dignities, Rights, and Freedoms of the Crown of England, in all manner whole, without any manner of miniſhment; and the Right of the Crown, hurt, decay'd, or loſt, to their Power ſhall call again into the Antient Eſtate. Which Oath, the ſaid Queen kept inviolably, and liv'd the more quietly for it all the time of her Reign, and died in Peace. True it is, they may, and do gratifie their Friends and Servants, in giving them the Emoluments and Profits that ariſe from Printing; but the Power they cannot alienate from the Crown, without loſing the moſt pretious Stone out of their Diadem. To ſhew you one Example for all, the ſaid Queen, the firſt Year of her Reign, grants by Patent the Priviledge of ſole Printing all Books, that touch or concern the Common-Laws of England, to Tottel a Servant to her Majeſty, who kept it intire to his Death: After him, to one Yeſtweirt, another Servant to Her Majeſty: After him, to Weight and Norton; and after them, King James grants the ſame Priviledge to More, one of His Majeſties Clerks of the Signet; which Grant continues to this Day; and ſo for the Bible, the Statute-Laws, the Book of Common-Prayer, Proclamations, as much as the Grammer, the Primer, &c. are all granted by Kings and Queens, not onely to gratifie their Friends and Servants, but to preſerve the Regal Power and Authority on Foot, and theſe Books from being corrupted. Patents for Printing, granted to ſeveral perſons.

The Truth of this the moſt impudent Opponent will not deny, becauſe the Patents themſelves give Evidence againſt them; nor will they deny in words (though they do daily in fact) that the King hath Power to make ſuch Grants.

But this they will Object and ſay, That Gentlemen being Object. 2.

not Printers by Trade, nor Free of the Company of Stationers, can never find out the Abuses of Printing themselves, nor understand the Cheats of them, they being so many; but they must be discovered either by the Printers, or the Company of Stationers, or both together: This is the Common Objection.

Answer. To which I Answer; The Objection cannot properly lye against any man for being a Gentleman, because the greatest Nobleman will not deny himself to be one, nor can he with Honour refuse a Challenge from any Gentleman: And the very Mechanick is so willing to disguise his want of Gentility, that when he arrives to a Considerable Estate, he is very forward to purchase Honour. Nor can I think any man the less knowing for being a Gentleman, whose Education is most commonly at School, at the University, the Inns of Court, Travell, or both; Whereas the Education of a Mechanick is only at School, without any other Improvements: This being the Course that each of them generally runs, 'tis strange if the Gentleman should not get the start, and be better known to Letters, Manners, and Men, than the Mechanick. But this Objection goes further.

3. Object. That though they may know Letters, &c. better than the Mechanick, yet they can never arrive to a full Discovery of the Mystery and deceitfull part of the Trade; that they must give Handicrafts men leave to know best.

1. Answ. To which I Answer; First, That there is no Magick in this Art; Jugglers they may be, but Conjurers they are not.

2. Answ. Secondly, That Gentlemen may and do know the Mystery and Deceipt of the Trade as well as those that act it; but their knowledg tends different wayes. It is the Gentlemen or Patentees part to detect and hinder this Deceipt; As 'tis the Stationers to promote and practice it: Their Profit blinds them so, that they resemble certain Birds, who when they hide their heads, think none can see their Bodies; Or like Children, who after a fault Committed, wink themselves, thinking thinking thereby that none can find them out. To render this possible, I will give you an Instance of a Person, that none can deny to be a Gentleman, though he were much more, (I mean the late King) who was not onely aliquis in omnibus, but singularis in omnibus.

The King more skilfull than Mechanicks in their own Trade.

This excellent Prince, hearing of a rare Head, amongst several other Pictures, brought Me from Rome, sent Sir James Palmer, to bring it to Whitehall to Him, where were present divers Picture-Drawers and Painters: He ask'd them all, Of whose Hand that was? Some guest at it; Others were of another Opinion; but none was positive: At last, said the King, This is such a Man's Hand, I know it as well, as if I had seen him draw it: But (said he) is there but one Man's Hand in this Picture?

None could discern, whether there was or not: But most concluded, there was but one Hand: Said He, I am sure there are two Hands in it, for I know the Hand that drew the Heads; but the Hand that drew the rest, I never saw before. Upon this, a Gentleman that had been at Rome, about Ten Years before, affirmed, That he saw this very Picture, with the two Heads, unfinished at that time; And that he heard his Brother (who staid there some years after him) say, that the Widow of the Painter that drew it wanting Money, got the best Master she could find to finish it, and make it saleable. Is it not strange, that the King that was no Picture-Drawer himself, should see further into a Picture, than Painters by Trade.

Patentees fittest to redress the Evils of the Press.

But were the Objection true (as 'tis much to be doubted) yet were the Patentees still the very fittest Persons to be imployed, in redressing the Evils of the Press, wherein they are concern'd, because their Interest leads them to it: And Men will come to a soon Discovery, even of obscure things, where their Interest inclines them; Indeed, the Printers Argument against the Booksellers, &c. being all of the Company of Stationers, doth hold in point of Government amongst themselves, That 'tis absurd and ridiculous for any, to have the Rule and Oversight of that which they have no insight in.

But this is not at all applicable (nor do they intend it to be so) to the King's Patentees; who (if they be not Printers themselves, nor have a Printer of their own) agree with one to Print such a Book, whereof they have the Propriety, which Printer gives him Security to Print the same perfect, and with a fair Letter; it matters not whether the Pattentee can set the Letters, or have Skill in the Manufacture himself; 'tis sufficient for him to examine it with his Copy when 'tis done, (which Copy cannot erre, because it is under the publique Licence) and try whether it be as 'twas agreed; and if it be not as it ought to be in all respects, the Printer loseth his Labour and Charge: 'Tis the Printers Interest then as well as the Patentees, to Print it perfect and fair; without which, (should they both joyn together) they could not vend it, after 'twas Printed. I confess, it would argue an ill Nature in me, not to be sorry for the just Occasion the Printers have to complain of their Brethren the Booksellers, were it not for this, That when some men fall out, others shall hear of their Goods: Yet I cannot but side with the Printers thus far, as to Declare, That they, with the Founders of Letters, are the onely Instruments of absolute Necessity in this ART; whereas Book-Sellers might be supply'd out of the She-Shopkeepers in Westminster-Hall, if all the rest were higher promoted. In fine, These Book-Sellers are the Drones that devour the Honey, made by the Laborious Printers; I cannot so sensibly express it, as themselves have done: therefore hear them, and not Me; Say they, So far were the Stationers from redressing the Printers Wrongs, that some of themselves, took upon themselves, the Exercise of their Function, and gave a Forreigner his Freedom gratis, to inable him to usurp the Exercise of the Printers Calling; and to compleat the Abuse, Erect a Printing-House of their own: so as it is become a Question among the Book-Sellers, whether a Printer ought to have any Copy or no? Or if he have, They (keeping the Register) will hardly enter it: Or if they do, they and their Accomplices will use all means to disparage it, if not down-right counterfeit it, that they Tyrannize over Printers. And further, That for want of a due Establishment, Transgressors never want Incouragers to begin, or Chapmen to vend such Ware, when finished among among the Stationers. They desire, that such as are free of the Trade, may be free indeed, and not manumitted (as of late) from the Service of one Master, to the Slavery of many Tyrants: That the Stationers have usurped their Callings, and incouraged, yea hired others so to do, and stand related to each other, as the Buyer to the Seller. Upon all which, they refer their Cause, to the same Power that gave them theirs, who may resume, or abridge the same, upon Mis-use, at their pleasure. This is a sad Complaint of Elder Brethren against their Younger; if one Dog will not prey upon another, what Reason can be given, why Men should devour Men? And if this be the Usage those must trust to, to whom they profess Friendship; what is like to become of the Patentees, against whom they profess Enmity? If such a Power be continued to them, which I hope will be seriously considered of, before it shall be re-granted. Success (which usually gives Confidence) hath so hardned them, that having not felt the Justice of the King's Hand, for above twenty years last past, they now begin to swear Him out of, and Themselves into, this Part of His Regal Power: For they being lately Examined upon Interrogatories, between Atkins et Uxor. Plaintiffs, and Flesher and the Stationers Defendants; some of them (I am sure) are so streight-mouth'd, that they do not declare the whole Truth of what they know on our Part, and seem to make a Conscience of Swearing at all; As if St. Paul had been in an Errour, when he said, An Oath for Confirmation, is an end of Strife. Indeed, they strein'd at a Gnat, but when they were to swear on the other Part (namely their own) they open their Mouthes wide enough to swallow a Camel. Say they, from the Year 1641. or 1642. until the time of His Majesties Blessed Restauration to His Crown, any Booksellers that listed, did print, or cause to be printed, such Law-Books as seemed good unto them, without Restraint or Prohibition, occasioned by the Licence of the late Times: And that such as had Licence under the King's Grant to print Law-Books, were hindered to make the Benefit of the said Grant; And that it was usual for such persons as printed Law-Books, to enter the same in the Book of Stationers-Hall; And that it was conceived and taken, that such person and persons, as Entred a Copy in the said Hall-Book to be Printed, had the sole Right to print print the ſame; and thoſe that claim'd the Right of Printing Law-Books under the King's Licence, were thereby taken to be Excluded, and debarred to claim any Benefit therein.

Obſerve what a ſad time the Kings Patentees endur'd for almoſt Twenty years together, conteſt by the Oaths of theſe honeſt Men, that joyn'd in dividing the Spoyl: And ſhall it be ſo ſtill, now the King is return'd again? I dare poſitively ſay it ſhall; Witneſs a Book called Poulton's Abridgment, particularly Expreſt in the Law-Patent, which they Printed ſince the Kings Reſtauration, by vertue of an Entry only in their Hall-Book, againſt the ſaid Patent; the Patentee's Leſſee Fleſher (a principal Member of the Company) finding the Stationers like to be worſted at the Council-Board in the Conteſt of their ſaid Entry againſt the Kings Grant, joyns Intereſt with them, and alſo Engageth the Kings Patentees Truſtee, and the Kings Printers (who pretended Some Intereſt in the ſaid Book) on their ſide; As if ſeverall bad Titles could create one good one: By which means after Four Hearings, the Cauſe (ſeeming to be between Party and Party) was diſmiſt, but with the Recommendation of the King and Councill to the Lord High Chancellor, on the behalf of the ſaid Patentee (who had the Equitable Right): The Company to requite the Leſſees kindneſs in defending them from a Contempt againſt the KING, (he being the perſon in Law that ought to have defended the Patent for the King againſt the ſaid Company) like Brethren---joyn with the Leſſee to defend him againſt the Juſtice of the Court of Chancery, and Combine together to defeat the Patentee of his Rent by Covenant, and ſo bandy the Legall Intereſt from one hand to another, that it cannot be yet found where it Veſts; and to enable him the better, make him Maſter of the ſaid Company for two years together (never known before), and chooſe Wardens fit for the purpoſe, who Engage the Stock of the whole Company on his behalf, againſt the King's Patentee: And being thus fortified, they publiſhed the ſaid Book with this Title Page, Printed for the Company of Stationers, John Bill and Chriſtopher Barker his Majeſties Printers; and ſo make a mixt Intereſt, Intereſt, to render the Title the more queſtionable in the future; but do not ſo much as mention the Kings Patent at all, by which the ſaid Book is granted by Name: This ſerves the Turn for the preſent occaſion, and being ſo poſſeſt as aforeſaid, Fleſher and the Stationers give 200 l. to the Patentee's Truſtee to releaſe the Rent and Covenants of the ſaid Leaſe, and the Kings Printers 100 l. or 200 l. for their aſſiſtance in ſo difficult a Work as this, and then ſell the Impreſſion for 1600 l. (as appears by their own Oaths) which Impreſsion alone over-payes them all the Moneys they are out of Purſe: And had they not been ſtopt in their full Carrear at the Council-Board, or rather by Injunction in Chancery, (which they Complain of as a hinderance to their Trade alſo by Oath) they had by this time altered the Ancient Law-Books, and caſt them into a new Modell of their own Invention; that by degrees the ſtate and truth of the good Old Lawes by which Men hold their Lives and Eſtates, ſhould utterly be loſt and forgotten, and new Laws fram'd to fit the Humours of a new Invented Government; which they little value, ſo they may have full rates for their Books, and their Goddeſs Diana be ſafe.

I have gone thus far upon mine own Strength onely, without any publique or private aſſiſtance; and becauſe I am not willing to endure the Field much longer of my ſelf, I think it my Duty to ſtate the Caſe truly as it is, and implore the Ayd of ſuch Neighbours (who cannot probably prevent the burning down of their own Houſes, when mine is firſt ſet on fire): Common Experience tells us, a juſt Cauſe ſignifies little of it ſelf, if it be not backt with Diligence and Friends: Bonum apparens et bonum verum et abſolute, are ſo like, (though of a Contrary Nature) that the Credit of the beſt Teſtimony gives either precedency; 'tis therefore not only hard, but impoſſible for one Man to Contend with a Thouſand, and not be Conquered. Hercules was moſt Strong and Valiant, and yet, ne Hercules contra duos. I have no proper Refuge but to his Majeſtie in this Caſe, which I do chiefly Eſpouſe for his ſake, who like King David is worth Ten Thouſand of us. I have not the Power to Impose, but rather to Propose his Majesties timely Assistance: Onely this I hope I may say without offence, That if the King suppose it not for his Interest, I shall more willingly lay down the Cudgells, than I took them up at first: But if otherwise, I am as Careless of their Malice, as Gallio, it being not the first time I have past upon the Forlorne Hope.

'Tis against the Stationers Interest to redress the Evills of the Press.

By this time the Impartiall Reader may inclin'd to believe, the Company of Staticners are not the fittest Persons to redress the Evills of the Press; because 'tis most certain, that none but themselves can offend: And 'twould be greater Self-denyall in them than can be expected, to punish themselves contrary to their Interests. There are at least 600 Booksellers that keep Shops in and about London, and Two or three Thousand free of the Company of Stationers; the Licensed Books of the Kingdome cannot imploy one third part of them: What shall the rest do? I have heard some of them openly at the Committee of the House of Commons say, They will rather hang than starve; and that a man is not hang'd for stealing but being taken; necessitas cogit ad turpia. But this is not all, 'tis not onely for their Interest not to Suppress them, but to Maintain them: An unlicensed Book bears Treble the price of another; and generally the more Scandalous a Book is, by so much the more dear: This hath inricht the Wealthiest of them; and when they fear losing their ill-got Goods, they put their Journy-men of the poorer sort, or their Apprentices, upon the Work, going shares with them, and taking their Oaths or other Security to be true to them, though false to all the World besides. Thus do they breed up their Youth like the Lacedemonians, who allow'd their Children little or nothing but what they could get by filching and stealing: That the Printers are Poor and Numerous, can no body deny, for it hath lately been the great Work of this Parliament to lessen their Number, and to provide for their Poor. But because Extream Prices may be doubted by those that do not usually buy, I will give you one Instance for all; I was lately in a Book-seller's Shop, where where I saw a Book in Quarto, entituled, Killing no Murder, it had but eight Leaves in all, stitcht up without binding, he demanded 5 s. for it, and would not take less: A Book of the same bigness Licensed, would have cost but 4 d. or 6 d. at the most. 'Tis not then the Interest of the Company of Stationers to suppress unlicensed Books: Whose is it then? I Confidently Affirm, it is the Patentees, who derive from the King. I shall give you one Similitude of the like Nature; The King, as belonging to the Honor of Windsor, hath a great Quantity of Ground of which he makes little or no benefit, because it lyes in Common; And the Neighbours thereabouts, do not onely eat the Herbage, but steal the Kings Deer, and destroy his Woods, without giving any Accompt or Satisfaction whatsoever: To prevent which Mischief, the King Incloseth several Parks, and gives the keeping of them to several Persons by Patent, reserving what he pleaseth out of them, the rest he gives the Patentees: these are still the Kings Parks, though kept by the Patentees; for the King kills what Deer he pleaseth, disposes of the Venison, and sells the Timber for Repair of his Houses, Shipping, &c. What wrong doth He to His Neighbours, by Inclosing His own Lands, which He denyes to none of His Subjects? Yet His Neighbours are troubled, because they cannot wrong Him as before; and upon every Distemper of the Commonwealth, destroy the Fences, and make it Common again. Is it not (think You) the Interest of the Pattentees, to defend the Kings Right, and their own Profit under Him, and to prosecute the Law against such Offenders? Is not the Interest of the King and His Patentees so involv'd, that they cannot be divided? Just so is it by Inclosing Printing; the King (having the Right thereof, as much as of any Crown-Lands) Grants all sorts of Books, necessary for the Education of Youth, or the Improvements of Age, or whatsoever else is usefull for Soul, Body, or Estate, to several Persons by Patent; it will much concern these Patentees, in Honour and Profit both, to see their several Grants be not Trespassed upon, nor Corrupted by others: And so they have ever kept their Copies intire, till the latter end of the late King Charles

The unconscionable dealing of Booksellers.

His Reign; At which time, the Company of Stationers, by fair Pretences, (as they did before to Queen Mary, to get their Charter) obtain'd a Decree of Star-Chamber, to Inveſt the Executive Power of Printing in them, againſt the Patentees; and then Libellous and ſcandalous Books and Pamphlets began to fly about like Lightning: And when this was ſtrengthned with an Act of 17 Car. which took away the Juriſdiction of the Councel-Board and the Star-Chamber (at leaſt between Party and Party), their Miſchief was compleated, and they impowred to vent the Paſſions of all Diſcontented Minds in Print, againſt Monarchy and Epiſcopacy; which they perſu'd with ſuch Diligence and Succeſs, that they did eradicate both Root and Branch: Whereas the Council-Board, and the Star-Chamber, did uſually Fine and Impriſon ſuch Tranſgreſſors; Of which, I can ſhew ſeveral Preſidents, from the time of Queen Elizabeth, to this King's Reign.

The ſad Effects of the Executive Power of Printing in the Company of Stationers.

Object. 4. But it may be ſaid, Scandalous, Libellous, and Heretical Books may be Printed of themſelves, without any Relation to the ſeveral kinds of Books granted by Patent.

Anſw. I Anſwer, 'Tis very true; but as long as the Goſpel, the Lawes, and all other Books for the Advancement of Learning, good Manners, and Education of Youth, that are in Grant, be kept intire, without any mixture of Hereſie, Scandall, or Schiſme, 'twill go a great way in preventing Libells and Scandalls; and the Parliament may do the reſt with greater Eaſe, by reducing the Number of Preſſes, and inflicting great Penalties upon ſuch as ſhall Print and Publiſh unlicenſed Books and Pamphlets: Which Penalties cannot be too big, becauſe it lyes in their own power whether they will offend or not.

Too great Penalties cannot be inflicted for Offences in Printing.

If the Power this Parliament hath given the Company of Stationers, had taken any good Effect, they might have poſſibly continued it: But as a Worthy Gentleman Notes, amongſt other moſt true and Ingenious Obſervations, That not one Perſon hath been Fin'd, and but one proſecuted, by the

the Company of Stationers, ſince the late ACT, notwithſtanding ſo much Treaſon and Sedition Printed and diſperſt ſince that time; but he himſelf (being an Active Gentleman and Loyall Subject) hath Diſcovered more within this two years, than the Company of Stationers have done ever ſince they had a Charter. To this give me leave to adde, That 'tis not likely (ſetting profit aſide) even in order to Kingly Government, they ſhould ſuppreſs theſe Books; for a Corporation being in it ſelf a Petit-State, is inconſiſtent with Monarchy. Wofull Experience tells us, That very few, if any, went further with the KING than their own Intereſts led them; Which puts me in mind of a Story of Queen ELIZABETH, who being at Quinborough upon an Occaſion, the Maior of the Town brought her onwards of her Way ſo far, till the Queen deſir'd him to return back again, ſaying, he had brought her far enough: To which he replyed, Madam, I'le bring your Majeſtie as far as my Way lyes. For his Worſhip, being a Landed Man, had a ſmall Tenement about a mile further.

More Treaſon and Sedition diſcovered by a Gentleman in two years, than hath ever been by the Stationers.

I wiſh Corporations would do but as much as that, and not go out of their Way to deſtroy Monarchy; for I muſt needs confeſs, that ſhining Shooes and ſet Ruffs were very forward to ſit in Judgment upon the late King's Party, for doing but their Duty to their PRINCE, which they themſelves ought to have done.

And here I might take occaſion to ſay, That though the Lawes of GOD be infinite and everlaſting, and fitted for all Times and Perſons, yet the Lawes of Men are like themſelves, finite, imperfect, and ſubject to Infirmity, and Death it ſelf, as the makers are: Hence it comes, that ſo many Laws are repeal'd, and others made in their rooms; and hence it may come, that all leſſer Governments under a Monarchy may by miſuſer be wholly taken away, or elſe abated; as was heretofore the Barons Power by their ſo often taking up Arms againſt the KING; and the two Hundreds of Dudſon and Kings Barton, who were by this very Parliament taken out of the Juriſdiction of Gloucester, though enjoy'd by them ever ſince the Times of Richard the Third, the Grant being being judg'd unreasonable; our best Lawes and Constitutions by Age losing strength and vigour, as our Bodies do, either by the Crafty Evasions of the Offendors, or by the alteration of their Vices, or by the male-administration of Justice upon the Malefactors; for the just performance of which last, none have greater Encouragement than the reward of a good Conscience to fortifie them against the malice of those they punish; who though they Act according to their best Judgment, yet by reason of some doubtful penning of a Law, Offenders are also many times taken out of the hand of Justice, to the very great encouragement of the Delinquents, and discouragement of the Punishers; insomuch, as when Twyn was lately arraign'd for Printing Treason, he was condemn'd by the old Law, though there be a new one now Extant for that very purpose. And so I return to the Stationers again; where I find them very Sollicitous with the Parliament to Enlarge, or at least Confirm, this Power they have already, (resolving to have it by Hook or by Crook) and Promising all care and diligence for the future, if they shall be once more trusted; saying, with Absolom, O that I were made Judge in the Land, &c. That every Man might have Justice: and what followes, but presently raising an Army against King David, though his own Father.

Let not the Reader conjecture I lay an Imputation upon every particular Member of the Company, (for there are too many of them that groan under the like Burthen, as I my self do,) but against the whole Corporation, as a Body Politique (especially as 'tis now governed.)

I have now shewed you the Practices of the Company of Stationers, and some particular Members thereof, against the King, and his Patentees; who, like Painted Sepulchres, appear Glorious without, but within are full of Rottenness and Corruption: I have also opened, tented, and sering'd the Sores of their Body Politique, and tryed them to the quick (which I hope will not prove like the Touch of a Gall'd Horse-Back, to receive a Kick for my Labour and good-will). But because I am not so good a Chirurgion, as to close and cure them again my self, I shall implore the help of the Parliament, and and shall most humbly Recommend them to their Cure, together with these ensuing Observations and Proposals.

The Reasons inducing Queen Mary to Incorporate the Stationers, are expressed in her Charter in these words, Nos considerantes quod seditiosi et heretici Libri, Rithmi, &c. indies sunt editi, excuss. et impressi per diversas scandalosas, malitiosas, Schismatic. et heretic. personas, non solum movend. Subditos et Ligeos nostros ad seditiones et inobedientias, contra nos, Coronam et dignitatem nostras, verum etiam ad maximas et detestabiles hereses, contra fidem, &c. Et remedium congruum in hac parte providere Volentes; de gratia nostra speciali &c. The Queen Erects the Corporation with Powers and Trusts,

1. To make Lawes pro securo regimine of the Members of the Company.

2. To search for and seize Books Printed contrary to Law.

Observations and Proposals recommended to the Parliament.

Observ. 1. The Erecting this Corporation hath not proved Remediall against the Mischiefs recited in the Charter; But the Queen was wholly deceived in the Design aymed at in passing the Charter.

2. The Intrusting the Stationers with the Powers aforesaid, hath not only not remedied, but hath encouraged, encreased, and secured the Printing Sedition and Treason. For,

3. The Persons who are Intrusted with the Search and Discovery of the Offences to be remedied, are themselves the Common Offenders therein.

Principall and particular Members of the Company high Delinquents.

The Company, in their Politique Capacity, cannot Execute the Trusts, or merit or offend, but by their particular Members; divers principal Members of the Company have been actually Convicted, some as privy and accessory, other as Principals, in Printing and Publishing Illegal Books; and many Treasonable Books have been printed, during the late Troubles, for several principal Members of the Company.

4. The Company of Stationers have in other things exceeded the Authorities granted by their Charter, as by Imposing and and Administring of Oaths, &c. and by Entring other Mens Copies in their Hall-Book as their own, and then Printing and Selling them, in Opposition to the King's Grant; and this by vertue of a Law in the late Evil Times: and have also assumed to themselves (by Colour of the said Charter) the whole Right of Priviledging and Exercising Printing, and have Combined to oppose and overthrow the King's Just Power and Prerogative herein, and Interest of His Patentees.

1. From all which it appears, the Crown hath been deceived in the End and Design of Erecting the said Corporation.

2. That they have not proved Remedial, but Instrumental, to the Increase of the Mischiefs they should redress.

3. That they have broke and acted contrary to the Trusts imposed in them by their Charter.

4. They have, by Colour of their Charter, abused the Favour of the Crown, in exceeding the Authorities granted them, and assuming to themselves the whole Power of the Crown, concerning the Matter of Printing.

I therefore take the boldness, most humbly to propose to your Honours;

The Proposals.

I. That the King's Just Power and Prerogative, in the impowring and restraining Printing, and in the Hearing, Regulating, and Determining all Differences touching the same, as a Matter of State, be Declared and Confirmed, as an Antient and Hereditary Right of the CROWN; And that all Laws contrary thereunto be Repealed.

II. That an ACT for Regulating Printing may Establish Propriety therein according to the Kings Grants thereof, and may direct Rules for the Licensing and Management of Printing, and inflict Penalties for Abuses therein, with Legall Means for the Executing such Penalties, and for settling and securing every Man's Propriety, (saving the Right of the Crown) to regulate or restrain any Interest or Right in Printing, or other matter concerning the same, which by the King and Councill shall be conceiv'd a Nusance of State.

III. That

III. That the Charter of the Company of Stationers, who Claym thereby an unlimited Power in Printing, be examined, together with the Unreasonableness thereof, and the Abuses committed thereby, by Testimony of Witnesses to be Summoned to that purpose; And that the said Charter, and the Powers thereby granted, be limited according to Reason and the true Intent of the Grant.

IV. That the Penalty for Printing without Licence, be forfeiture of the Book or thing so Printed, and treble the value thereof, one Moyety thereof to the Patentee or Party interessed in the Right of Printing such unlicensed Book (if any person be therein interessed), or otherwise to the KING, and the other Moyety to the Informer: But that Books once Licensed, may be reprinted without Licence, or so much of them as shall be without addition or alteration.

V. That the KING's Patentee for Printing Law-Books, be Priviledg'd with a like Priviledge, as the Patentees for the Bible are, or shall be Priviledged; and with Power to search with an Officer for unlicensed Law-Books, and to Seize and carry away the same to some publique place.

VI. That no Disloyall or Notorious Criminal Person for Printing Treasonable or Seditious Books in the late Times of Trouble, be admitted to keep a Printing-Presse; And that such as be Intrusted with a Printing-Presse, be Sworn not to offend the ACT of Parliament, &c. and give Security for the same.

VII. That the Entry of other Mens Copies in Stationers-Hall, be declared to be of no Validity, especially as to give them any Title to such Books as are Granted by Patent to others.

And now it may be most truly said, That the Author is very tedious, and yet hath made few or no Propositions but such as concern the King and his Patentees. Object. 5.

Answer. To which I Answer, That all other Interests have not been wanting to make the best of their Case, and their Desires to be fully understood; And as for the Company of Stationers, they were by this late ACT so amply provided for, as that at the Committee of the House of Commons they had nothing more of Substance to desire. The Painters have also published a late Book, wherein they desire to be Incorporated and made a Company of themselves, apart from the Company of Stationers, of which they now are; and therein also have stated the best of their Case. Mr. L'Estrange hath also published a Book, wherein he Treateth of the whole matter in generall, and shews the severall Abuses of Printing and Printers, but hath not applyed himself to any particular Interest: And therefore I have taken the Boldness to say somewhat, though weakly, for the KING and his Patentees; hoping an ill Pen shall not destroy a good Cause; But that the Wisedome and Loyalty of this Parliament, which is Exemplary for both, will Supply all Defects, and take the Will for the Deed; The rather, because Extream Necessity enforceth me to say somewhat now before the ACT be past; Which makes me rather adventure to be ridiculous, than wanting to my Duty. I shall add onely one word more, That in a Business of so great Intricacy and Concernment as this of Printing, your Honours would not without very great Consideration, make an ACT for Perpetuity, In which all Interests may be equally Considered; the rather, because the late ACT now in being, which was past in hast, is judg'd (even by Your Selves) to have many Imperfections in it.

And if the Brewers, who at most can but steal away a Flegmatick part of the King's Revenue, deserve the serious Consideration of the Supreme Council of England, how much more these, that do not onely bereave the King of his Good-Name, but of the very Hearts of His People; between whom there is as much oddes, as between a Pyrate that robs a Ship or two, and Alexander that robs the whole World.

FINIS.
